STEP breeds knowledge

REEDSPORT — The circle of life is evident through the volunteer work done by members of the local Salmon Trout Enhancement Program.

For the last few weeks, STEP members have worked with employees from the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife, spawning hundreds of thousands of salmon eggs. On Nov. 7, students from the Reedsport Community Charter School were on hand to help catch, cut and count during the multi-step process.

The salmon used for breeding have already traveled up Winchester Creek, the end of the road for the fish, said Laura Jackson, a fish biologist with ODFW. Wild and hatchery male and female salmon are collected from a pen. They are soaked in a basin with a sedative, then harvested for their eggs or sperm.

"Winchester Creek is really a dead end of sorts," Jackson said. "If they've made it this far, they've passed all the anglers and there really isn't a good breeding ground for the fish up this far. It gives us a good place to get our breeding fish."

ety of wild and hatchery fish enhance the breeding chances.

"It enables us to get a good mix of genetics, so that the new salmon that are hatched have a better chance of survival," Verduyn said.

The group's target number is 200,000 fertilized eggs. To get this amount, the eggs of close to a dozen female fish must be used. On Nov. 7, the eggs of five females were harvested. Eight males were used for fertilization.

"We want to produce 100,000 that we release in Winchester Bay and then send another 80,000 or so to the Rock Creek Hatchery because they have a habitat where they're able to hold the fish over the summer," Jackson said.

Chris Teeter, one of the RCCS marine biology students helping with the process, was in charge of slicing the females. With a blade, he cut the underbelly of the female salmon, releasing a cascade of orangey colored eggs.

"They cut real easy, like butter," he said.

After the waterfall of eggs, Jackson searched the fish for any leftover eggs, being careful not to mix any blood or other

Reedsport rejects New Majority candidates

BY SARAH HAASE
The Umpqua Post

REEDSPORT — Incumbent Keith Tymchuk will take his seat as mayor for a sixth term and will be joined, in January, by Frank Barth, Dee Dee Murphy and Linda McCollum.

Tymchuk defeated opponent Merv Cloe who ran on a slate with Barth and two other candidates as the New Majority, a group who spearheaded a charter amendment aimed at rolling back wastewater rates and all other fee and tax increases. The measure was partially upheld in Douglas County Circuit Court.

Barth is the only candidate from the New Majority group who was elected. He defeated Ed O'Carroll, 812 to 658. Although Barth ran with the New Majority, he said when he takes his seat as councilor he will be there as an individual working for the community and the people who elected him.

"I really feel this is a duty I need to give back to the community I love," he said. "I'm pretty excited, but I'm also really scared. I hope that people will see that I'm going down to City Hall with an open mind. I want to refresh the livability in Reedsport."

Tymchuk said he was honored and humbled by his re-election. "Personally, I'm pleased for the city of Reedsport, I think this is an outcome that was needed," he said.

Spaghetti serves up smiles for needy in Reedsport

Volunteers for Christmas in July dish out piles of spaghetti and meat sauce during the annual fundraiser.

REEDSPORT — Spaghetti was a clear sign of success during the annual fundraiser for Christmas in July.

More than 100 people came through the doors of the Eagles Club on Thursday night to enjoy some quality food, good friends and some fun entertainment. The event is the nonprofit organization's biggest fundraiser, and this year, the spaghetti feed netted more than $2,000.

"It looks like people are having a lot of fun and that's important," said Sharon Thompson co-chair of Christmas in July. "We've had a very steady turnout. People have been coming through the doors and buying raffle tickets and it looks like they've been spending lots of money."

Diners enjoyed a full plate of spaghetti and meat sauce, salad and garlic bread. More than 40 pounds of pasta was prepared and Eagles member Chuck Stubblefield erred on the side of caution when he sent someone out on a pasta run.

Police confirm 2 people, 1 dog dead in wreck

By TYLER RICHARDSON
The Umpqua Post

HAUSER — Oregon State Police confirmed Wednesday that two people and a dog were killed when their pickup caught fire after colliding with a tree on U.S. Highway 101 late Tuesday night.

John W. Suiter, 32, and Andrea Belcher, 23, both of Lakeside, were pronounced dead at the scene.

The 1993 Ford Ranger truck, driven by Suiter, was heading northbound near milepost 227.5 at 11:20 p.m. when it crossed over the center line and went off the road into a ditch before striking a tree and catching fire.

Sgt. Josh Young, with OSP, said he couldn't identify any tire tracks on the road, indicating the driver did not brake before heading off the road.

OSP Sgt. Eric Judah said the cause of the crash is still unknown. Investigators will release more information once they conclude their investigation.

Firefighters from Hauser and Lakeside sprayed water onto the truck hours after the crash, and police searched for evidence around the crash scene.

A community treasure

The Reedsport Christmas in July is one of the greatest community service projects I've seen in a long time.

This summer, I got to report on and participate in the event. The good things that were accomplished in a day, were truly incredible. Endless amounts of gardening, repaired roofs, chopped wood piles, wheel chair ramps...

So many volunteers were working together to help those who could use a hand, physically or monetarily.

The summer event couldn't happen without fundraising events throughout the year and from an editor's point of view, a spaghetti dinner fundraiser is like Christmas. It's an event that provides a heart warming story and some potentially entertaining photos.

I have to admit, I went with the intention of getting just that, saying some hellos and then heading to The Body

SLICES FROM THE BIG APPLE

Sarah Haase, EDITOR

Shop, the new gym in town, for a nightly workout.

I should have known just by the delicious smells wafting outside the Eagles Lodge it was going to be more than that.

I resisted buying a dinner ticket. I had a job to do. I interviewed the cooks, some volunteers and some diners. I took some photos and then thought I was wrapping up the evening by talking with Sharon Thompson, co-chairwoman of Christmas in July along with Pastor Allen Chaney.

She asked me if I was staying for the Chinese auction. I had never heard of a Chinese auction and after she explained it to me briefly (bidders raise dollar bills in the air, runners grab them and the donor of the last dollar bill grabbed wins the prize) I decided I had to check it out.

To kill some time, I caved in and bought a dinner ticket along with some raffle tickets

Honestly, I'm not the biggest spaghetti fan, but the meal prepared (and donated) by the Eagles was pretty darn fantastic. I ate nearly my whole plate of pasta.

Soon, Carey Jones, auctioneer aficionado, was getting ready to start the Chinese auction.

He asked for some volunteers to be runners. Since I was in gym attire, I figured, why not?

Soon I was getting my workout. I was dashing around the lodge snatching dollar bills from the hands of donors, making every attempt to be the runner who grabbed the last bill.

I had a few people who won some loot.

Carey was kind enough to give us time to catch our breath—in between Chinese auction items, he chose some raffle ticket winners.

One of my tickets was chosen. I was the winner of a cute little basket filled with a washcloth and bar of Pacific peppermint soap made by the Tsunami Soap Company.

Was it luck or a secret message? I'm still not too sure.

In the end, the spaghetti dinner raised more than $2,000 for Christmas in July.

Equally important, though, is that everyone truly enjoyed themselves during the event. I know I sure did.

Reflections on Veterans Day

The following are my comments to the Veterans Day Celebration in Canyonville on Sunday, Nov. 11, 2012:

Great pride and great humility move me today, as we gather to honor the brave men and women who step forward to fight for our freedom and liberty.

As we have done since WWI ended 94 year ago, all across this nation Americans pause at the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month, and we remember.

We remember with pride, and respect, and gratitude those who served, and those who made the greatest sacrifice so that we can stand today, as free people in a great country.

We gather today at a war memorial that symbolizes a strong link in an enduring chain. That trusted chain reaches across our nation and links past and future generations of Americans who have, and who will, shoulder the burden of defending our freedom.

This is also a day to salute the strength and sacrifice of the families that stay behind when their loved ones answer the call of duty. It's a potent mixture of love, and pride, and fear that fills the hearts of these families. Those are feelings that stay with you forever. I salute your strength and your resolve; I salute the legacy of courage and steadfastness that your example sets for all our children.

This is also a day to recognize our enduring love of America and the value we place on military service - this is so much a part of who we are in Douglas County. We don't apologize for our patriotism. We're not shy about the tremendous respect we have for those who serve.

We rejoice, and celebrate, and appreciate, and respect the values of our nation. We admire, and respect, and thank those who defend us. So, at this moment, at the 11th hour, of the 11th day, of the 11th month let us pause. (Right then, two F-16 fighter jets flying tight formation streaked across the sky!)

Let us open our hearts to our Veterans, to those who are defending our freedoms today, and to our never ending commitment to our great nation.

May God bless our veterans and their families, and may God continue to bless America.

Measure 10-119, misunderstanding?

Proponents of Measure 10-119 had one simple goal. It was to include the people in the decision of spending their resources. Nothing in the simple measure prevented elected officials from continuing payment of contracted obligations to the state of Oregon.

For some reason Mayor Tymchuk refused to involve you in the decision of funding the replacement of the Reedsport sewage treatment facilities. Was this because you lacked understanding of what needed to happen? Some might conclude that, but it was because he simply did not trust the people for this decision.

This is further demonstrated in the fact that there was no attempt to seek the amending or modification of Measure 10-119 by going to the people. Instead elected officials used public funds and an outside legal team to fight the people.

It is baffling that the mayor could lead this effort and still seek your vote in his re-election. More baffling is the fact that voters provided him a very ample vote. Comparing this vote with the number that voted for the measure, one can conclude that many wearied from support of the measure and did not even vote.

Have they abandoned citizenship in favor of becoming subjects?

Measure 10-119 made Reedsport the envy of many. Universally it is agreed that the people should have a say over obligating their resources. Will Reedsport retain it? Since it only may be removed by a vote of the people, our trust must be in the people to protect the Charter addition the voters have established with almost a super majority for the measure.

Fly like an eagle

Wait, make that DINE like an Eagle. (Apologies to that 70s band) Those hard working Eagles are always cooking up something marvelous, and the steak diners are legendary. Find out what the fuss is all about this Saturday night at the lodge. It's steak dinner plus a dessert auction. If you've never been there for the auction you really should go. The tables are loaded with every kind of treat you can imagine and it all comes from the kitchens of Eagle members. There are some amazing cakes, pies, cookies, brownies.... and it's all made from the great baker's own recipes. The bidding can be pretty competitive in the best way, and don't be stingy, you deserve a treat for being such a hard working, dedicated person, don't you? Really, who on earth is a finer person than you are? See, you have it coming. And besides, the money raised from the auction goes to the scholarship fund to benefit a local student So get in there and throw those bills around. You see, it's just wrong not to! Plus, there's something about having a huge array of delish desserts sitting on your table that makes you the most popular person in the room. Prepare to make a lot of friends if you're lucky enough to get an Ethel Adamo creation. Yum!

There's always something going on at the Lodge. On Tuesdays it's bingo, so put on your lucky underwear and load up all those lucky stuffed animals, photos of saints, parking lot pennies...whatever works for you, and settle in for a night of winning. On Wednesdays it's tacos. There's something about an

Shop like an eagle

Well, with an eagle eye for treasure. The Holiday Bazaar is coming the first weekend of December and this year is going to be bigger and better than ever before. For ages the bazaar has been run by the Reedsport / Winchester Bay Chamber of Commerce and it's been terrific, but this year it has been handed over to CDABA. Expect to see even more booths and a lot of new items. Those CDABA folk are the natural choice since they are all artists who know artists who make art for the bazaar. How's that? It isn't too late to get a booth but it's bound to sell out soon. The spots are rented on a first come first served basis, so pick up the phone while you're thinking of it. Call Theresa at: 541-271-4608.

There is already a fun new addition this year for crafters and artists - a Christmas card contest. The card can be made out of anything that speaks to you - paper, fabric, dog hair....whatever sparks your imagination. They will be on display at the bazaar and the public will vote for the best one. The artist receives a small prize, $15 for first place, $10 for second and $5 for third. The money is small but the gesture grand. After the winner is announced, the artists can donate the card for CDABA to sell. The funds raised by the card sale will go to the Tree of Giving. This would be a fab project to work on over the Thanksgiving weekend with the family. Get the scoop on the rules from Tamara (541)271-2485.

And speaking of CDABA, the fall classes are a huge hit. I took the beginning watercolor class taught by Beebe Slater last Saturday and it was wonderful. I learned that I have zero talent, but I couldn't care less. It was fun! Beebe is a great teacher, and I learned enough to mix colors and got a lot of tips on how to use different techniques on the paper. The class supplies were part of the fee and it came with a very good instruction book, paper, colors, mixing tray...basically everything needed to create a masterpiece. Or, in my case to create a lovely mud color and make a mess. A messter-piece.

New business

It's Mr. Mom's Green Cleaning. Mr. Mom is Levi Allen who has been Mr. Mom at his house since baby Liam was born. He has a knack for the mom job and decided to turn it into a business. After all, his house is spotless, so now he's making his way through town leaving sparkling windows behind. Yes - he does windows. All the products are non-toxic and safe to use around babies and pets.

Nancie Hammond

WHAT'S UP?

He assures me it is perfectly safe to drink a cup of the green cleaner, but I think I'll just take his word for it. He also cleans carpets, power-washes the outside of houses, cleans gutters and more. And the stuff really works! For more information on what Mr. Mom can do for you, give him a call at: 541-974-4966.

What's up with the chamber

We're coming up on the end of the year, and it's been a truly great one. All of our events have been successful and our board is a terrific hard-working team. It's time to look toward 2013 and keeping the momentum going strong. There are some vacancies on the board and if you've ever thought about getting involved this is a good time to do it. Things are positive and we welcome positive people to be a part of it. If you're interested please give me a call at: 541-662-0018 or email me.

Quit smoking in the new year

REEDSPORT — It's never too early to start thinking about New Year's resolutions, and the missionaries for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints are offering help if quitting smoking is that resolution. Elders Nathan Cole and John Moua will provide a free workshop that is designed to help aid those that would like to be free of addiction. Cole said there are no scare tactics, gimmicks or hypnosis, just one on one, non-threatening private meetings in a place of the participants choosing.

While the workshops are run by the missionaries, they are not affiliated with any religion, but include techniques from a 12-step process used to help kick bad habits. For information or to set up a free meeting, contact Cole at 541-331-1398.

Final day for Coast Guard food drive women must run one mile. The guard has already recorded 2,200 miles. The cans will be sent to local food pantries for families in need. Cans be dropped off at the guard station in Winchester Bay or at The Umpqua Post's office, 2741 Frontage Road. The drive ends on Thursday, Nov. 15.

American Welding Society Coos Bay Chapter underway at SWOCC

CONTRIBUTED ARTICLE
For The Umpqua Post

A chapter of the American Welding Society is organizing on the Coos Bay Campus. Jessica Carder, a second year welding student said, "Women can excel at this vocation, it requires attention to detail and more and more women are pursuing this skill."

Carder hopes the club will help promote the idea of women in welding by becoming more visible at SWOCC and in the community.

Brandon Ledsome, also a second year welding student, said the students are organizing themselves to carry out new projects that will help the welding program and the community. Welding materials are very expensive and the cost of certification can be expensive for students who are already stretching their budgets.

Last year, the students designed and built a trailer and barbecues. The barbecues rival commercially built barbecues that are seen at community fairs and similar functions. They see the club volunteering to make this equipment available to community projects for a donation in return.

Carder and Ledsome said many businesses in the community recognize the value of the welding program at SWOCC and have given materials and supplies to help the program. These companies include: Oregon Tool, Oregon Pacific, Farris True Value Hardware, Industrial Source, Empire Mercantile, Farwest Tire, Coos Head Forest Products, Gold Coast Truck Repair, Shinglehouse, Bed Rock Cat & Core.

Dunes meeting at Riley Ranch is on Saturday

Dunes supporters are gathering for an afternoon of information and fun on Saturday, Nov. 17 at Riley Ranch OHV Park.

The rally is in response to the U.S. Forest Service proposal to close undesigned user-developed routes.

There are nearly 4,500 acres of dunes designated to manage and protect "vegetated habitats while providing controlled opportunities for off highway vehicles."

According to the forest service, many of the existing routes traveled by OHVs within that management zone are not designated routes and could be closed.

A complete draft plan can be viewed online at <http://goo.gl/sflvk>.

The Oregon Dunes NRA also will host an open house that day from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. The open house will be held in the Florence High School Gymnasium located at 2975 Oak St.

The format will feature stations where attendees can visit with forest staff and view maps and alternatives describing options for designated riding routes.

Specialists involved in developing the draft Environmental Impact Statement will be available to answer questions regarding the project.

Reedsport's volleyball team poses with its trophy at the state tournament on Saturday. The Braves finished third for the second straight year.

Braves place third at state tourney

THE UMPQUA POST

Reedsport senior Taylor Lewis was the Braves' only setter for the volleyball team during the state tournament seasons in 2010 and 2011.

But when Lewis had an illness earlier this season, the Braves were forced to find another option, and coach James Hixenbaugh called on his daughter, sophomore Kaylynn, to fill in.

That move proved fortuitous for the Braves at the Class 2A state tournament over the weekend.

Lewis went down with a wrist injury during the fifth game of the team's opening match against Weston-McEwen, and Kaylynn Hixenbaugh was called into duty as setter the rest of the tournament.

The Braves held on to beat the TigerScots, 25-14, 25-21, 23-25, 16-25, 15-13 in the quarterfinals.

Monica Vaughn had 21 kills, 14 digs and two aces, Gabby White had 11 kills and four blocks and Lewis had 41 assists.

Reedsport's dreams of a state title ended in the semifinals for the third straight year, when Days Creek topped Reedsport in four games Friday night, 18-25, 25-18, 25-23, 25-20. Hixenbaugh had 26 assists as she stepped in at setter, Vaughn had 13 kills, Kayla Doane had nine kills and four blocks and Madi Richardson tallied 10 digs.

But the Braves bounced back Saturday afternoon to top Heppner in the third-place match, 25-22, 17-25, 25-22, 25-23.

It was the second straight year that Reedsport placed third, the best finish in school history.

Vaughn, a senior outside hitter, was named to the all-tournament first team, while junior middle hitter White was a second-team selection.

"I thought we played really well and with a lot of heart, that last game against Heppner especially," Vaughn said.

In the third-place match, the Braves bounced back after the rough second set, she said.

"We just kept going strong and working hard for every point," Vaughn said. "Everyone was getting excited and cheering, and it was so awesome just coming back like that after our loss against Days Creek because we could have easily given up."

Instead, the Braves ended up earning another state trophy.

"It was really cool to end our season like that and end my senior year that way, too," she said.

Vaughn also was on the first team last year, when the Braves lost to Portland Christian in the semifinals and beat Heppner in the third-place match. Lewis was on the second team last year.

Eden Huebner, who graduated last spring, was on the first team both last fall and in 2010, when Reedsport finished fifth.

Reedsport finished the season with a 22-7 record overall and won its third straight Sunset Conference championship.

The team's only losses to Class 2A schools were a 2-1 setback to Culver during a tournament at McKenzie and the loss to Days Creek in the semifinals Friday. The Braves beat Days Creek during a preseason tournament at Reedsport.

Three of the other losses came to Creswell, which finished fourth in the Class 3A tournament, and two others were to teams that finished third in their tournaments (Marshfield in Class 5A and Blanchet Catholic in Class 3A).

The only loss to a team that didn't place in its state tournament was a defeat to Class 4A Siuslaw in the season-opening Reedsport Invitational.

Practice starts for winter sports

THE UMPQUA POST

The fall sports season has just ended, at least for the volleyball players, but practice for the winter sports started this week at Reedsport Community Charter School.

And it's only two weeks before Reedsport opens the basketball season with a Sunset Conference double-header against Coquille, the defending league champion for both boys and girls.

The Braves and Red Devils meet on Nov. 28 at Reedsport, with the girls game at 6 p.m., followed by the boys about 7:30 p.m.

Both Reedsport head coaches return, with Kent

Kristensen leading the boys and Stu Richardson coaching the girls.

The Coquille game is Reedsport's only Sunset Conference action before January. But the highlights of the first month of the season include the annual Dune Country Classic on Dec. 21 and 22.

Reedsport's wrestling team, meanwhile, will begin its season on Dec. 1 at the Glide Invitational.

The Braves will be coached this year by Philip Lopez, who returns to the school after two years away from the team.

Lopez also is planning to start a junior high team.

Crabbers still getting limits in Winchester Bay

Crabbing at Winchester Bay remains good. It seems that female and undersized crab are becoming an ever-bigger nuisance, but crabbers willing to put in their time are getting limits of legal crab. Of course, boat crabbers have it easier than the dockbound crabbers and last week, it seems that the crab even moved upriver somewhat, as some good catches were made more than a half-mile upriver from the entrance to Winchester Bay's East Boat Basin.

It seems that the very best dock crabbing is occurring before daybreak and after dark, but those willing to put in their time are catching some crabs all day long — but those catching limits are definitely earning them.

Salmon fishing pressure on the lower Umpqua River has almost stopped. However, the very few anglers still trying for salmon are catching some. Local angler Tom Crittenton weighed in a nearly 16-pound Chinook taken on a spinner near the mouth of Winchester Creek last Saturday and a few salmon are still being hooked at Half Moon Bay and Osprey Point when anglers are fishing it. The salmon fishing pressure is so low, that one is forced to wonder if the catch per angler has dropped all that much.

On the ODFW website, the publishing of the catch rate of wild coho on Oregon coastal rivers was delayed, but statistics for most of the wild coho rivers for the week ending Nov. 4 are now on the site — and the catch (not the catch rates) statistics are rather humble. The statistics for the Coos and Coquille rivers are still pending and the Alsea River is closed to the taking of wild coho, but there were ZERO wild coho retained on the Nehalem River and Tillamook Bay, one retained coho reported on the Nestucca and Siletz rivers. The Yaquina had six wild coho reported taken, the Umpqua has 16 and the Siuslaw, which amazingly is still open for wild coho, had 31 retained wild coho.

Last week, coho salmon were reported caught from all three lakes that allow coho salmon fishing. The hottest bite was on Tahkenitch Lake, where it was easy to find the coho at the upper ends of Five Mile and Mallard arms.

Siltcoos Lake and the upper portion of the outlet that is open to fishing for coho is still producing salmon, but the biggest surprise has been Tenmile Lakes, which surprisingly has some bright coho in it. As usual, most of the coho are being caught by bass anglers fishing spinnerbaits and crankbaits and although this happens every season, the salmon are too dark to keep when they finally get into the lake. Bank anglers on Tenmile can fish that tiny stretch of Tenmile Creek above the Hilltop Drive Bridge in Lakeside and have a chance to hook a salmon.

Fishing pressure on the South Jetty and Triangle areas at Winchester Bay is increasing and bottomfishing angling has been good.

Almost all the warmwater fishing pressure in our area has been directed towards yellow perch.

Trout anglers should consider stillfishing with bait as the water cools down and the trout become less active. The best fishing is in the area's larger lakes that hold native, searun and carryover trout.

I hear a lot of griping about the ODFW and while I seldom directly contradict the whiners, I often wonder how much griping they would do if they lived in California. In the last few years, for what appears to be a very small financial donation to the California Department of Fish and Game, the United States Humane Society has managed to have a lot to say about hunting and fishing in California. Additionally, SB1221, recently signed into law in California makes it illegal to use dogs to hunt or even chase bear or bobcats. The bill also gives the California Department of Fish and Game broad powers when it comes to establishing hound hunting requirements that could ultimately make it necessary for onerous documentation for hounds to the point where a microchip may be required. This is not to say that these things will come to pass, just that they are possible under the new bill.
